Since there is optical path difference between the lenses, flare is caused to be produced. Especially, in case of a light source at an edge of the frame, the flare is produced by a lens of which the incident ray intersects perpendicularly with the optical axis. In order to overcome the above-described problem, a method of moving an optical filter disposed on an optical path of the optical system to prevent the flare has been known. In Japanese Patent Publication of Unexamined Application No. H10-226905, a technique of preventing the flare from being caused by moving the optical filter in the conjugate plane (2× focal length) perpendicular to the optical axis and keeping a diffuser function for wide angle shots has been disclosed. However, in the method of the prior art, the optical filter is relatively moved within a predetermined distance, so that the wide angle shots cannot be achieved. In addition, in the method of the prior art, the optical filter is provided in a fixing structure and its moving mechanism is complicated.Q: Can we restrict the minimum skill level for Adventurer's League play to drop from Expertise?
